Azad H.Waisy

Windows Application and Database Developer, IT Technician, and specialist

In the field, I worked toward becoming as inventive as I could, and I obtained my bachelor's degree in information technology management. Every job I've had has prioritized managing troubleshooting, networking, developing Windows programs and databases, and maintaining computers. Governmental and non-governmental organizations praised me greatly for successfully finishing multiple types of databases. Not to mention that controlling team members' access to the server falls under the purview of the IT specialist. Since 2016, I've worked as a freelance programmer and IT specialist. Together with subject matter specialists, I create database systems and Windows programs for large companies and organizations, including NGOs, hospitals, and Directorates.
